ABOUT THIS FILM:

What can we learn from those who have turned their psychological crisis into a positive transformative experience? CRAZYWISE follows two young Americans who achieved exactly that: Adam, 27, & Ekhaya, 32.

While documenting indigenous cultures, photographer and filmmaker Phil Borges often saw these cultures identify “psychotic” symptoms as an indicator of shamanic potential.

CRAZYWISE doesn't aim to over-romanticize indigenous wisdom, or completely condemn Western treatment. However, indigenous peoples' acceptance of non-ordinary states of consciousness, along with rituals and metaphors that form deep connections to nature, to each other, and to ancestors, is something we can learn from.
